

RES

How much this is in every man's power, by making resolutions to himself, is easy to try.

The mode of the will, which answers to dubitation, may be called suspension; that which answers to invention, resolution; and that which, in the phantastick will, is obstinacy, is constancy in the intellectual.

5. Constancy; firmness; steadiness in good or bad.
The rest of the Helots, which were otherwise scattered, bent thitherward, with a new life of resolution; as if their captain had been a root, out of which their courage had sprung.

I would unstate myself to be in a due resolution.
They, who governed the parliament, had the resolution to act those monstrous things.

What reinforcement we may gain from hope,
If not what resolution from despair.

6. Determination of a cause in courts of justice.
Nor have we all the acts of parliament or of judicial resolutions, which might occasion such alterations.

RESOLUTIVE. adj. [resolutus, Lat. resolutif, Fr.] Having the power to dissolve.

RESONANCE. n. f. [resono, Lat.] Sound; resound.

An ancient musician informed me, that there were some famous lutes that attained not their full seasoning and best resonance, till they were about fourscore years old.

RESONANT. adj. [resonant, Fr. resonans, Lat.] Resounding. His volant touch

Fled and pursu'd transverse the resonant fugue.
To RESORT. v. n. [resortis, Fr.]

1. To have recourse.
The king thought it time to resort to other counsels, and to provide force to chastise them, who had so much defiled all his gentler remedies.

2. To go publicly.
Thither shall all the valiant youth resort,
And from his memory inflame their breasts
To matchless valour.

Hither the heroes and the nymphs resort.
To repair to.

3. To repair to.
The fons of light
Hasted, resorting to the fumous high.
To Argos' realms the victor god resorts,
And enters cold Crotopus' humble courts.

4. To fall back. In law.
The inheritance of the son never resorted to the mother or to any of her ancestors, but both were totally excluded from the succession.

RESORT. n. f. [resort, Fr.]

1. Frequency; assembly; meeting.
Unknown, unquestion'd in that thick resort.

2. Concurrence; confluence.
The like places of resort are frequented by men out of place.

3. Act of visiting.
Join with me to forbid him her resort.

4. [Resort, Fr.] Movement; active power; spring.
Some know the resorts and falls of business, that cannot sink into the main of it.

In fortune's empire blindly thus we go,
We wander after pathless destiny,
Whose dark resorts since prudence cannot know,
In vain it would provide for what shall be.

To RESOUND. v. a. [resono, Lat. resonor, Fr.]

1. To echo; to sound back; to celebrate by sound.
The sweet singer of Israel with his psalter loudly resounded the innumerable benefits of the Almighty Creator.

The found of hymns, wherewith thy throne
Incompass'd shall resound thee ever blest.

2. To sound; to tell so as to be heard far.
The man, for wisdom's various arts renown'd,
Long exercis'd in woes, oh muse! resound.

3. To return sounds; to sound with any noise.
With other echo late I taught your shades,
To answer and resound far other song.

To RESOUND. v. n. To be echoed back.
What resounds in fable or romance of Uther's sons.

What is common fame, which sounds from all quarters of the world, and resounds back to them again, but generally a loud, rattling, impudent lye?

RESOUND. n. f. [resound, Fr.] It is commonly written resound, which see: resound, Fr. skimmer derives it from resound, Fr. to spring up.]

Some new or unexpected means that offer; resort; expedient.
Pallas view'd
His foes pursuing, and his friends pursu'd;
U's'd threatenings, mix'd with prayers, his last resound;
With these to move their minds, with those to fire their force.

To RESOUND. v. a. [re and sow.] To sow anew.
Over wet at sowing time breedeth much dearth, inasmuch as they are forced to resow summer corn.

To RESPOND. v. n. [re and speak.] To answer.
The great canon to the clouds shall tell,
And the king's rowle the heav'n shall bruit again,
Resounding earthly thunder.

RESPONSE. n. f. [responso, Lat.]

1. An answer.
Mere natural piety has taught men to receive the responses of the gods with all possible veneration.

The oracles, which had before flourish'd, began to droop, and from giving responses in verse, defended to prose, and within a while were utterly silenced.

To make his parishioners kneel and join in the responses, he gave every one of them a hassock and common prayer book.

Reply to an objection in a formal disputation.
Let the respondent not turn opponent; except in retorting the argument upon his adversary after a direct response; and even this is allowed only as a confirmation of his own response.

RESPONDIBLE. adj. [responsum, Lat.]

1. Answerable; accountable.
He as much satisfies the itch of telling news; he as much persuades his hearers; and all this while he has his retreat secure, and stands not respondible for the truth of his relations.

RES

To RESPECT. v. a. [respectus, Lat.]

1. To regard; to have regard to.
Claudio, I quake,
Left thou should'st seven winters more respect
Than a perpetual honour.

In orchards and gardens we do not so much respect beauty, as variety of ground for fruits, trees, and herbs.

2. [Respectus, Fr.] To consider with a lower degree of reverence.
There is nothing more terrible to a guilty heart, than the eye of a respected friend.

Whoever tastes, let him with grateful heart
Respect that ancient loyal house.

3. To have relation to.
I always loved and respected Sir William.

4. To look toward.
The needle doth vary, as it approacheth the pole; whereas, were there such direction from the rocks, upon a nearer approachment, it would more directly respect them.

Palladius adviseth, the front of his house should respect the South, that in the first angle it receive the rising rays of the winter sun, and decline a little from the winter setting thereof.

RESPECT. n. f. [respectus, Fr. respectus, Lat.]

1. Regard; attention.
You have too much respect upon the world;
They lose it, that do buy it with much care.

My country's good with a respect more tender
Than mine own lie.

2. Reverence; honour.
You know me dutiful, therefore
Let me not shame respect; but give me leave
To take that course by your consent and voice.

Aneas must be drawn a suppliant to Dido, with respect in his gestures, and humility in his eyes.

3. Aweful kindness.
I found the king abandon'd to neglect;
Seen without awe, and serv'd without respect.

He, that will have his son have a respect for him, must have a great reverence for his son.

4. Goodwill.
Pembroke has got
A thousand pounds a year, for pure respect;
No other obligation?

That promissive thousands.
The Lord had respect unto Abel and his offering.

5. Partial regard.
It is not good to have respect of persons in judgment.

Many of the best respects in Rome,
Groaning under this age's yoke,
Have with'd, that noble Brutus had his eyes.

6. Reverend character.
Manner of treating others.
You must use them with fit respects, according to the bonds of nature; but you are of kin to their persons, not errors.

The duke's carriage was to the gentlemen of fair respects, and bountiful to the soldier, according to any special value which he spied in any.

7. Consideration; motive.
Whatever secret respects were likely to move them, for contenting of their minds, Calvin returned.

The love of him, and this respect beside;
For that my grandfate was an Englishman,
Awakes my conscience to confess all this.

8. Relation; regard.
In respect of the suitors which attend you, do them what right in justice, and with as much speed as you may.

I have represented to you the excellency of the christian religion, in respect of its clear discoveries of the nature of God, and in respect of the perfection of its laws.

9. Every thing which is imperfect, as the world must be acknowledged in many respects, had some cause which produced it.

They believed but one supreme deity, which, with respect to the various benefits men received from him, had several titles.

RESPECTER. n. f. [respectus, Lat.] One that has partial regard.

Neither is any condition more honourable in the sight of God than another; otherwise he would be a respector of persons: for he hath proposed the same salvation to all.

RESPECTFUL. adj. [respectus and full.] Ceremonious; full of outward civility.

Will you be only, and for ever mine?
From this dear bosom shall I ne'er be torn?
Or you grow cold, respectful, or forsown?

- With humble joy, and with respectful fear,
The listening people shall his story hear.

RESPECTFULLY. adv. [respectus, Lat.] With some degree of reverence.

To your glad genius sacrifice this day,
Let common meats respectfully give way.

1. Particular; relating to particular persons or things.
Moses mentions the immediate causes, and St. Peter the more remote and fundamental causes, that constitution of the heavens, and that constitution of the earth, in reference to their respective waters, which made that world obnoxious to a deluge.

When so many present themselves before their respective magistratures to take the oaths, it may not be improper to awaken a due sense of their engagements.

2. [Respectus, Fr.] Relative; not absolute.
The medium intended is not an absolute, but a respective medium: the proportion recommended to all is the same; but the things to be desired in this proportion will vary.

Worthy of reverence. Not in use.
What should it be, that he respects in her,
But I can make respective in myself.

3. Accurate; nice; careful; cautious. Obsolete.
Respective and wary men had rather seek quietly their own, and with that the world may go well, so it be not long of them, than with pain and hazard make themselves advisers for the common good.

He was exceeding respective and precise.
RESPECTIVELY. adv. [respectus, Lat.]

1. Particularly; as each belongs to each.
The interruption of trade between the English and Flemish began to pinch the merchants of both nations, which moved them by all means to dispose their sovereigns respectively to open the intercourse again.

The impressions from the objects of the senses do mingle respectively every one with his kind.

2. Relatively; not absolutely.
If there had been no other choice, but that Adam had been left to the universal, Moses would not then have said, eastward in Eden, seeing the world hath not East nor West, but respectively.

Among the ministers themselves, one being so far in estimation above the rest, the voices of the rest were likely to be given for the most part respectively with a kind of secret dependency.

3. Partially; with respect to private views. Obsolete.
The principles of those governments are respectively disclaimed and abhorred by all the men of sense and virtue in both parties.

He, that will have his son have a respect for him, must have a great reverence for his son.

4. With great reverence. Not in use.
Honest Flaminius, you are very respectively welcome.

RESPIRATION. n. f. [respiro, Lat. respirare, Fr.] The act of sprinkling.

RESPIRATION. n. f. [respiration, Fr. respiratio, from respiro, Lat.]

1. The act of breathing.
Apollonius of Tyana affirmed, that the ebbing and flowing of the sea was the respiration of the world, drawing in water as breath, and putting it forth again.

Syrups or other expectoratives do not advantage in coughs, by slipping down between the epiglottis; for, as I instilled before, that must necessarily occasion a greater cough and difficulty of respiration.

The author of nature foreknew the necessity of rains and dews to the present structure of plants, and the uses of respiration to animals; and therefore created those correspondent properties in the atmosphere.

Relief from toil.
Till the day
Appear of respiration to the just,
And vengeance to the wicked.

To RESPIRE. v. n. [respiro, Lat. respirare, Fr.]

1. To breathe.
The ladies gasp'd, and scarcely could respire;
The breath they drew, no longer air, but fire,
The fainty knights were scor'd.

2. To catch breath.
Till breathless both themselves aside retire,
Where foaming wrath, then cruel tucks they whet,
And trample th' earth the whiles they may respire.

3. To rest; to take rest from toil.
The air imprison'd also, close and damp,
Unwholesome draught; but here I feel amends,
The breath of heav'n fresh blowing, pure, and sweet,
With day-spring born; here leave me to respire.

4. And see! he strikes the golden lyre;
Hark! the tutur'd ghosts respire,
See shady forms advance!

RESPIRE. n. f. [respiro, Lat.]

1. Reprieve; suspension of a capital sentence.
I had hope to spend
Quiet, though sad, the respite of that day,
That must be mortal to us both.

RES

RESPECTIVE. adj. [respectus, Lat.]

1. Particular; relating to particular persons or things.
Moses mentions the immediate causes, and St. Peter the more remote and fundamental causes, that constitution of the heavens, and that constitution of the earth, in reference to their respective waters, which made that world obnoxious to a deluge.

When so many present themselves before their respective magistratures to take the oaths, it may not be improper to awaken a due sense of their engagements.

2. [Respectus, Fr.] Relative; not absolute.
The medium intended is not an absolute, but a respective medium: the proportion recommended to all is the same; but the things to be desired in this proportion will vary.

Worthy of reverence. Not in use.
What should it be, that he respects in her,
But I can make respective in myself.

3. Accurate; nice; careful; cautious. Obsolete.
Respective and wary men had rather seek quietly their own, and with that the world may go well, so it be not long of them, than with pain and hazard make themselves advisers for the common good.

He was exceeding respective and precise.
RESPECTIVELY. adv. [respectus, Lat.]

1. Particularly; as each belongs to each.
The interruption of trade between the English and Flemish began to pinch the merchants of both nations, which moved them by all means to dispose their sovereigns respectively to open the intercourse again.

The impressions from the objects of the senses do mingle respectively every one with his kind.

2. Relatively; not absolutely.
If there had been no other choice, but that Adam had been left to the universal, Moses would not then have said, eastward in Eden, seeing the world hath not East nor West, but respectively.

Among the ministers themselves, one being so far in estimation above the rest, the voices of the rest were likely to be given for the most part respectively with a kind of secret dependency.

3. Partially; with respect to private views. Obsolete.
The principles of those governments are respectively disclaimed and abhorred by all the men of sense and virtue in both parties.

He, that will have his son have a respect for him, must have a great reverence for his son.

4. With great reverence. Not in use.
Honest Flaminius, you are very respectively welcome.

RESPIRATION. n. f. [respiro, Lat. respirare, Fr.] The act of sprinkling.

RESPIRATION. n. f. [respiration, Fr. respiratio, from respiro, Lat.]

1. The act of breathing.
Apollonius of Tyana affirmed, that the ebbing and flowing of the sea was the respiration of the world, drawing in water as breath, and putting it forth again.

Syrups or other expectoratives do not advantage in coughs, by slipping down between the epiglottis; for, as I instilled before, that must necessarily occasion a greater cough and difficulty of respiration.

2. Relief from toil.
Till the day
Appear of respiration to the just,
And vengeance to the wicked.

To RESPIRE. v. n. [respiro, Lat. respirare, Fr.]

1. To breathe.
The ladies gasp'd, and scarcely could respire;
The breath they drew, no longer air, but fire,
The fainty knights were scor'd.

2. To catch breath.
Till breathless both themselves aside retire,
Where foaming wrath, then cruel tucks they whet,
And trample th' earth the whiles they may respire.

3. To rest; to take rest from toil.
The air imprison'd also, close and damp,
Unwholesome draught; but here I feel amends,
The breath of heav'n fresh blowing, pure, and sweet,
With day-spring born; here leave me to respire.

4. And see! he strikes the golden lyre;
Hark! the tutur'd ghosts respire,
See shady forms advance!

RESPIRE. n. f. [respiro, Lat.]

1. Reprieve; suspension of a capital sentence.
I had hope to spend
Quiet, though sad, the respite of that day,
That must be mortal to us both.

2. To catch breath.
Till breathless both themselves aside retire,
Where foaming wrath, then cruel tucks they whet,
And trample th' earth the whiles they may respire.

3. To rest; to take rest from toil.
The air imprison'd also, close and damp,
Unwholesome draught; but here I feel amends,
The breath of heav'n fresh blowing, pure, and sweet,
With day-spring born; here leave me to respire.

4. And see! he strikes the golden lyre;
Hark! the tutur'd ghosts respire,
See shady forms advance!

RESPIRE. n. f. [respiro, Lat.]

1. Reprieve; suspension of a capital sentence.
I had hope to spend
Quiet, though sad, the respite of that day,
That must be mortal to us both.

2. To catch breath.
Till breathless both themselves aside retire,
Where foaming wrath, then cruel tucks they whet,
And trample th' earth the whiles they may respire.

3. To rest; to take rest from toil.
The air imprison'd also, close and damp,
Unwholesome draught; but here I feel amends,
The breath of heav'n fresh blowing, pure, and sweet,
With day-spring born; here leave me to respire.

4. And see! he strikes the golden lyre;
Hark! the tutur'd ghosts respire,
See shady forms advance!

RESPIRE. n. f. [respiro, Lat.]

1. Reprieve; suspension of a capital sentence.
I had hope to spend
Quiet, though sad, the respite of that day,
That must be mortal to us both.

2. To catch breath.
Till breathless both themselves aside retire,
Where foaming wrath, then cruel tucks they whet,
And trample th' earth the whiles they may respire.

3. To rest; to take rest from toil.
The air imprison'd also, close and damp,
Unwholesome draught; but here I feel amends,
The breath of heav'n fresh blowing, pure, and sweet,
With day-spring born; here leave me to respire.

4. And see! he strikes the golden lyre;
Hark! the tutur'd ghosts respire,
See shady forms advance!

RESPIRE. n. f. [respiro, Lat.]

1. Reprieve; suspension of a capital sentence.
I had hope to spend
Quiet, though sad, the respite of that day,
That must be mortal to us both.

2. To catch breath.
Till breathless both themselves aside retire,
Where foaming wrath, then cruel tucks they whet,
And trample th' earth the whiles they may respire.

3. To rest; to take rest from toil.
The air imprison'd also, close and damp,
Unwholesome draught; but here I feel amends,
The breath of heav'n fresh blowing, pure, and sweet,
With day-spring born; here leave me to respire.

4. And see! he strikes the golden lyre;
Hark! the tutur'd ghosts respire,
See shady forms advance!

RESPIRE. n. f. [respiro, Lat.]

1. Reprieve; suspension of a capital sentence.
I had hope to spend
Quiet, though sad, the respite of that day,
That must be mortal to us both.

2. To catch breath.
Till breathless both themselves aside retire,
Where foaming wrath, then cruel tucks they whet,
And trample th' earth the whiles they may respire.

3. To rest; to take rest from toil.
The air imprison'd also, close and damp,
Unwholesome draught; but here I feel amends,
The breath of heav'n fresh blowing, pure, and sweet,
With day-spring born; here leave me to respire.

4. And see! he strikes the golden lyre;
Hark! the tutur'd ghosts respire,
See shady forms advance!

RES

Wisdom and eloquence in vain would plead
One moment's respite for the learned head;
Judges o' waiting and of men have dy'd.

2. Pause; interval.
The fox then counsel'd th' ape, for to require
Respite till morrow 'twixt his desire
This customary war, which troubleth all the world, giveth little respite or breathing time of peace, doth usually borrow pretence from the necessary, to make itself appear more honest.

Some pause and respite only I require,
Till with my tears I shall have quench'd my fire.

- To RESPIRE. v. n. [